"It's Not All About Winning"

By Sensei Mark Huard

A tournament is not all about winning first place. True, getting that nice first place trophy at the tournament where you were in a division competing against 20 other people is thrilling and quite possibly the ultimate achievement, but after all it is only a piece of plastic. True point of a tournament is often lost due to a few fanatical folks who push their children to the limit, and scream and throw a fit when their child gets less than perfect scores, and only places third. Yes, tournaments were originally designed to weed out the weak and prove once and for all the best of the best, but there is more to them than just simply competition. Tournaments can improve your child's confidence and image of themselves immensely, but only if they are rewarded. I am not talking actual trophies here, because everyone cannot place in the top three; but I mean positive re-enforcement, that gentle pat on the back and reassuring smile that only a parent can give.

It takes a special kind of person to get out there in front of hundreds of people and strut their stuff, so everyone who competes is truly a winner.

Tournaments fuel that dogged determination, that drive that makes kids get out there and compete over and over again, with the thought and mindset that one day they will get that first place trophy. In my eyes, that is the true winner, the ones who fight tooth and nail to get to the top. And believe it or not, that quality in a child is very much parent-driven. How often you praise your child and how much support you give them determines how hard they are going to get out there and try and it also determines whether they will give up or not. That positive attitude and gentle "I'm proud of you" is what will make your child believe in himself or herself and be a winner.
